

RAT CATCHER INFECTED.

John Unger Is Seventh Struck With Bubonic Plague.

The seventh case of bubonic plague this year is John Unger, 4882 Annunciation street, a rat catcher in the public health service. Dr. Lombard, directing the government campaign, believes he contracted the disease while trapping in the vicinity of Nun and Tchoupitoulas streets, and points to the instance as proof that the men on the force are doing heroic work for the public benefit. Dr. Robin, city health superintendent, says the man was promptly taken to the Isolation Hospital, which permitted the injection of serum in time.
